Dr. McArthur's Testimony in the The following is a brief synopsis of the in-cresting testimony of Rev. R. S. McArthur in he Guiteau case yesterday:

The witness testified that in 1872 the pris-oner and his wife came to him with letters of dismission in good fellowship from a Chicago Baptist Church. These letters commended them to the watch, care and fellowship of the Galvary Baptist Church. He was well dressed, gentlemanly, and seemed to be deserving. He said he had jost his business by the Chicago fre and was in need. Witness introduced him to a number of business men with a view to help in business.

free and was in need. Witness introduced him to a number of business.

"Boctor, I expect $5,000 owing to the Herald disability, and when I get it I'll send you a check for $125 for interest and all."

Dr. McA., with ease and elegance, was proceeding to narrate the relations of the prisoner with the members of the Calvary Church when Mr. Scoville stopped him, and urged that his testimony was not relevant.

Guiteau—"He is an orator, Dr. McArthur, is, you can see that; let him speak."

Witness, being instructed by the Court, continued, and testified that on September 27, 1872, the prisoner and his wife were admitted to membership, and soon afterward they told him that they were in extreme need, and about to be turned out on the sldewalk. Said witness: "When my heart goes in kindliness toward a man believed to be worthy, my hand goes out in helpfulness, and I gave them the money," Witness thinks it was $100. Witness then described the prisoner's entrance to the church, and said his remarks then were notable neither for ability nor for weakness; witness afterward heard that the prisoner was engaged in fraud, and was soon sent for by him at Jefferson Market jail. There witness told him he feared that he was a bad man, and decilning to get bail for him, told him that the law must take its course, and left him in jail. Soon after charges of immorality were brought against him.

Guiteau—"That's the time I committed adultery to get a divorce. I was not going to live with a woman I did not love,"

The Witness—He was summoned before the church, came and acknowledged his guilt.

Guiteau—"That's not so. I let the case go by default."

The charges and specifications on which he was the and avenilled from the church were Guiteau..." That's not so. Het the case go by default."

The charges and specifications on which he was tried and expelled from the church were founded upon immoral and disgraceful acts, to all of which he pleaded guilty.

During the whole of this testimony Guiteau alked incessantly, proclaiming that he had been a virtuous man for seven years; that "it was a great plees of impertinence to dig up a record in this way, and if he had been happily married this would not have occurred."

Dr. McArthur, continuing, testified that he never saw anything like insanity in Guiteau.

Without concluding Dr. McArthur's testimony the court adjourned until to-day.

Amy Darnes, the nurse, testified that she was attracted to the rear of the house by suspicious noises, and saw John Weedon and another negro standing outside attempting to force an entrance.

of his action in declining to romain a member of President Arthur's Administration. This of his action in deciming to remain a member of President Arthur's Administration. This defense, which comes from a close friend of Mr. MacVeagh, and is claimed to reflect his views, opens with the singular statement that had he remained Attorney-General, "he would have been a component part of an administration with which he was not in accord on an important point of public polley, and from which he could expert neither sympathy nor support." General Arthur is a Republican, and so is Mr. MacVeagh. In a party sense, General Arthur is a Republican and so is Mr. MacVeagh. In a party sense, General Arthur is a Republican party in so far as it is possible to do so under our Constitution and forms of government. And yet, if Mr. MacVeagh was to comply with General Arthur's request, and remain Attorney-General, he would have been a component part of an administration with which he was not in accord on an important point of public policy, one of them must have ceased to be a Republican. Who is it?

Mr. MacVeagh resorts to immendo against the President to sustain his course. He intimates that if he remained in office to prosecute the Star-route cases the moral influence of the Administration would be thrown against the success of such prosecution. How does he know that it would? He intimates that there was only one way in which the present Administration could be dragooned into a vigorous prosecution, and that was for Mr. MacVeagh to decline to conduct the prosecutions further, and to compel the Administration to choose an agent of its own for that purpose, for whose acts it would be responsible. This seems to be a non sequitur. In the opinion of the Star-route cases hay in continuing the prosecution in the bands of those who had began it. It is barely possible that Mr. MacVeagh and no special fitness for such work the prosecution of the Star-route cases in a few hours. Certain occurrences have prefty well convinced by it that Mr. MacVeagh ind not run away from a dairy which he had sought in the first place, in order, a Arrest of a Notorious Bond Robber, The following dispatch was received from Buffalo Monday night: "Wm. Burke, alias Charles H. Page, has been arrested here as the thief who stole $117,000 worth of railroad bonds belonging to President D. P. Eelis, of the Commercial National Bank of Cleveland, bonds belonging to President D. P. Eelbs, of the Commercial National Bank of Cleveland, Burke was taken in at the express office white inquiring for a suit of clothes shipped from Cleveland to him.

It appears that he with two other men ordered suits at Cleveland, which were to be shipped to Buffalo, and his two companions are supposed to have the stolen bonds in their possession. Burke halls from Chicago, and is recognized as a professional bank sneak thief. Last summer he was caught in the act of attempting to steal valuable papers out of a vault in a bank at Cohees, N. Y. He was arrested and admitted to ball. He was again arrested for a similar attempt at a bank in Baltimore, but again got out on bail. He had no difficulty in raising the money, as he is considered to belong to a gang of 'experts' which would put up $50,000 if necessary. He is also wanted at betroit, Lockport and other places. The arrest recalls the famous bond robbery in this city at the Eric County Savings Bank a few months ago, but the officials of that institution were unable to identify him as the mysterious person at their bank on the day the theft occurred. William Burke will be remembered as the man arrested some weeks ago in the safe of the Savings Bank of Baltimore. He had entered the building in company with two others, and asked to see the president, Mr. Striling. While the men were talking to the cashier Burke walked in the ante-room and into the safe of the Savings Bank of Baltimore. He had entered the building in company with two others, and asked to see the president, Mr. Striling. While the men were talking to the cashier Burke walked in the ante-room and into the safe valut. He was followed and captured. He gave his name as Tom Smith. His pal was arrested in Philadelphia some time afterward on the charge of robbery of a tray of jewelry from Patterson & C. His name was Walter Sheridan, allas Walter Roylston. Burke, alias Smith, was released on ball, and two days after his release a dispatch was received from Albany asking the

As an item of interest in the opening trade with Mexico, it is urged as especially important that portage by mule is inevitable in many districts, and that as the mules will lie down occasionally upon their loads, the packages need to be particularly well packed.

A young farm laborer recently died from a wound caused by a pitchfork, and when inquiry was made for the weapon it was found carefully wiped, greased and laid away, as a means of promoting the cure of the wound. This curious custom seems to be a lingering relic of the ancient sympathetic cure, by which the weapon inflicting the hurt was carefully treated as a remedial agency.

GEORGE WILLNER,

N. Y. Graphic. Mr. MacVeagh has undertaken the defense

After our Senate report closed yesterday Mr. Voorhees submitted a resolution which, at his of his action is declining to remain a member instance, was tabled and ordered printed, for of President Arthur's Administration. This the reference to the Committee on Finance of defense, which comes from a close friend of the recommendations in the President's Message in favor of the repeal of the acis nutber izing the coinage of silver and the issue of silver certificates and their retirement from circulation.

Mr. Garland introduced a bill in relation to the Presidential succession, upon which he gave notice of his intention to speak when the subject is taken up on Tuesday. Tabled.

On motion of Mr. Hoar, the memorial presented at the called selection in relation to the title by which the New York Senitor's bold their seats was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. Ferry, from the Committee on Postoffices, reported back with an amendment the bill granting the frankling privilege to the widow of President Garnell.

He asked and obtained unanimous consent for a suspension of the rules to consider the bill granting the frankling privilege to the widow of President Garfield.

He askest and obtained unanimous consent for a suspension of the rules to consider the bill. In reply to Mr. Cockrell, he explained that the committee amendment consisted simply in making the language conform to the requirements of the present Revised Statutes on postal matters; that otherwise it was identical with the precedents in the cases of the widows of Presidents Tyler, Polk and Lincoln, and that the report was a unanimous one.

Mr. Maxey, of the same committee, made a like statement in relation to the unanimity of the committee's action.

The bill was read and passed without objection, being the first of the session to press the Senate.

Pendling a motion for adjournment, President pro tempore Davis addressed the Senate as follows:

SENATORS: You will pardon me for going outside the rules in calling attention to the fact that the 5th of December, the day on which Congress convened, was the fiftieth annaiversary of the day when Isaac Bassett, the muchesteemed Doorkeeper of the Senate, became connected with this body. Half a century ago he entered our service as a page through the influence of Daniel Webster. In all the mutations of parties no attempt was ever made to disturb him. Surely no higher tribute could be patid to his fidelity and to his integrity than that he has been so long and so satisfactorily identified with the history of the Senate. I am sure the sentiment on all sides is cordially expressed when I wish him health and happiness in the name of the Senate of the United States. No action, having been no dissent from the sentiment expressed, the Senate, at 3:25 o'clock, adjourned until Monday.
